Market Commentary

US Equity markets continued to rally to new all-time highs in 3Q21 before a late-September slide as China slowdown and regulatory concerns, global supply chain bottlenecks, rising COVID-19 cases and a policy shift from the Fed all contributed to a sell-off that saw the S&P 500 give back much of its quarter-to-date gains. Following an 8.6% return in 2Q21, the S&P 500 rose 0.6% in 3Q21, marking the sixth consecutive quarter of positive returns.

The first half of 2021 was characterized by record levels of nominal GDP and corporate earnings growth. While the 2H21 economic outlook is positive, GDP growth is expected to slow as year-over-year comparisons become more challenging and a number of potential near-term headwinds emerged. A surge in COVID-19 Delta variant cases may have dented consumer activity and confidence, while adverse weather conditions in a number of areas across the globe have put further pressure on already-disrupted supply chains. However, improvement in labor markets has continued while consumer health remains resilient with the unemployment rate nearly one-third of the pandemic peak. 4Q has the potential to grow with a focus on corporate investment, a further service-oriented reopening, and an increase in fiscal spending from Washington, DC.

Bond Market Performance

The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 1.5% in the third quarter of 2021, while the NASDAQ Composite Index fell 0.2%. The S&P 500 Index climbed only 0.6% over the same time period.

Fixed Income Markets Commentary

Treasury yields remain a driving force in markets after peaking in late 1Q21 and finishing 2Q21 near 1.5%. In 3Q21, Treasury yields continued to trend lower through August before rebounding sharply to end the quarter near flat with the 10-Year Treasury yield at 1.49%. Yields are likely to see upward pressure over the next 12 months as inflationary pressures persist and shifting Fed policy drives a re-pricing in bond markets. The Bloomberg Barclays US Aggregate Bond Index rose 0.1%, after rising 1.8% last quarter.

Riskier parts of the bond market, such as US high yield debt, had muted gains in the third quarter. The Bloomberg Barclays Capital High Yield Index, a measure of lower-rated corporate bonds, gained 0.9%. Mortgage-backed rose slightly in the third quarter. The Bloomberg Barclays Mortgage-Backed Securities Index rose 0.1%. Municipal bonds fell; the Bloomberg Barclays Municipal Index fell 0.3% on the quarter.
